Practice Information Sheet & Notice of Privacy Practices

The following information has to do with both the federal and local laws governing the practice of psychotherapy, my approach to therapy, and policies of my practice. While detailed, I ask that you please read it carefully. If you have any questions or concerns after reading this letter or at any time, please don't hesitate to discuss them with me. Please sign both copies of this letter and take one with you for your records.

MY APPROACH TO THERAPY

Whether working with a couple or individual, I view therapy as a joint effort between myself and my client(s). I provide clients with a safe space and expertise gained with training and experience, and my clients provide their expert knowledge on themselves, their experiences, their thoughts, and their feelings.

I believe that quality therapy involves mutually agreed upon goals and a way to evaluate when goals have been met. Thus, together my clients and I set goals with the following question in mind: What do you want to be different when we finish therapy? I also work with my clients to continually monitor the goals we set, to make sure progress is being made, and to change or re-vamp the goals as needed. I continually check-in with my clients to make sure that therapy is working for them and that we are on the right pathway for their change, adjusting our focus working together as needed.

I take an active approach to therapy. My goal is to offer my clients more than a place to vent. I try to provide my clients with feedback, ideas, and directions to address problems and make their lives better. Sometimes this means challenging and confronting clients. However, my goal is always to provide such challenges in the context of a very safe and trusting relationship where my clients know that I truly have their best interests at heart.

I realize that developing trust takes time and I do all that I can to develop a safe and trusting relationship with my clients. I ask my clients to be open and honest with me, and I work to provide a transparent style of therapy with my clients.

I believe that therapy is a place where clients should be able to speak the unspeakable. I believe therapy is a place where clients should feel both understood and challenged to make changes in their lives. I believe that if clients are open to the process of therapy and if they find a therapist who is a good fit for them, therapy can be life altering. I do all that I can to provide such therapy for my clients.

During our first session, I will explain my approach and training for conducting therapy in greater detail and discuss if you are comfortable with my approach and if I believe that I will be able to provide you with the assistance you desire. If not, I will refer you to another therapist and/or provide other resources.

Likewise, if at any point in our work together, you are unhappy with what is happening in therapy, I hope you will talk about it with me so that I can respond to your concerns, and make adjustments to our work together in order to provide you with the best services possible.

CONFIDENTIALITY

With the exception of the situations outlined below, you have the right to the absolute confidentiality of your therapy. I cannot and will not tell anyone else anything that you have told me, or even that you are in therapy with me. To release any information about you, I would need your written permission. You may ask me to share information about you with anyone you choose and you may revoke this permission at any time. Even when I have your written consent to release information, I will still protect your privacy and use my best judgment in sharing only information relevant to that person or that request.

The following are important legal exceptions to your right to confidentiality:

1. If I have good reason to believe that you are abusing or neglecting a child or a disabled or elderly adult, or if you give me information about someone else who is, I am required by law to report this to the appropriate state agency. The agency will determine whether to investigate further.
2. If I have good reason to believe that you are intending to harm another person, I am legally allowed to take actions that I deem appropriate to protect/warn that person (i.e., call the police, inform the victim). If such a situation does come up, I will fully discuss the situation with you before I do anything, unless there is a very good reason not to.
3. If I believe that you are in imminent danger of harming yourself, I may legally break confidentiality and inform those whom I believe could be of assistance to you (i.e., a family member, police, Alachua County Crisis Center). If such a situation arises, I will attempt to discuss the matter with you prior to taking action, unless there is a good reason not to. I will also attempt to explore with you all other options to insure your safety prior to breaking confidentiality. However, please be aware that if I believe your life is in immediate danger, I may release information which would protect your life, without your permission if I cannot get it. If this situation ever occurs, I will discuss this with you as soon as possible afterwards.
4. In general, if you get involved in court proceedings you can prevent me from testifying about what you have told me. This is called privilege and it is always your choice to invoke it or to waive it (allowing me to testify). However, there are some situations where the judge may require me to testify because the judge believes the court needs my information to make a good decision: a) in child custody or adoption proceedings where your fitness as a parent is in question; b) where your emotional, mental, or psychological condition is an important consideration; c) curing a malpractice or disciplinary hearing against a therapist; d) in a civil commitment where someone is being placed in a psychiatric hospital; and e) if you are seeing me for court-ordered psychological evaluations or treatment.
5. Please read the attached Notice of Privacy Practices at the end of this letter. As they explain, federal regulations allows me to use or disclose protected health information from your record in order to provide treatment to you, to obtain payment for the services I provide, and for other professional activities known as health care operations. By signing the consent at the end of this letter, I am asking you to give me explicit permission to use or disclose your protected health information for these activities.
 - a. The section below titled Confidentiality: Insurance Filing and Accounts with Overdue Balances contains additional details about the disclosure of your protected health information so please read that section carefully as well.

In addition to these legal limits to confidentiality, there are a few other points about your confidentiality you must know about:

1. I may sometimes consult (talk) about your treatment with other professionals, usually therapists. I do so in order to assure I am providing you with the best treatment possible. In such consultations, I do not reveal your name, and the other professionals are also legally bound to maintain the confidentiality of what we discuss.
2. When I am out of town or unavailable, another professional might answer phone calls to my office and I sometimes need to give him or her some information about my clients; I will only give the minimum information necessary. I will also discuss this with you beforehand.
3. I am required to keep treatment records. My records include any forms that you complete for me, brief summaries of each of our sessions, and any other documents that are relevant to your treatment. While the physical record belongs to me, the content of the record belongs to you, and you may ask at any time about the content of your record. I keep them in a secure location in my office. I am required by law to keep these records for 7 years after our last contact. They will be destroyed after 7 years.

CONFIDENTIALITY IN COUPLES COUNSELING

In cases where I am seeing you and your partner for couples counseling, I view your relationship as my client. Nevertheless, I may determine that it is beneficial to hold individual sessions with one or both of you. In this situation, I will inform you of my reasoning and we will make the decision about this together, exploring the benefits and risks of such a situation. However, if we do hold individual sessions, it is critical for you to understand and consent to the following: Information disclosed during your individual session may be revealed by me to your partner at a subsequent joint or individual session (i.e., individual session information is not confidential from your partner). In making the determination of what information would be disclosed, I use the categories of “private information” versus “secret information.” Private information is that which may be hurtful to share (e.g., “I sometimes wish I had married someone else.”), but is not having an ongoing negative impact on your relationship and/or undermining our work in couple’s counseling. On the other hand, secret information is that which is currently having a negative impact on the couple relationship, and/or that would have such an effect if discovered, and/or is undermining our work in couples counseling (e.g., having an ongoing affair while trying to work on the relationship in couple’s counseling; trying to work on your couple sexual relationship when an unrevealed sexual fetish is contributing to your and your partner’s sexual difficulties). At times, distinguishing between private information and secret information is difficult, and I will always discuss the determination with the revealing party. I will also work with the revealing party on the least harmful way to deal with the revealed secret. In sum, please be aware that I cannot work effectively with a couple in which secret information (as defined above) is revealed and I thus reserve the right to disclose information revealed to me during an individual session to your partner and/or to terminate couples counseling (with or without revealing the reason for termination). In cases of termination, I will provide referrals for both individuals to other therapists.

Additionally, my rule is that you must agree that if counseling does not resolve relationship difficulties, or if you are seeing me for another issue, and you seek a divorce, you will not request my testimony for either side although the court may order me to testify.

COMMUNICATING WITH ME OUTSIDE OF SESSIONS

Unless we have arranged otherwise, I am generally not available outside of office hours. However, if you do need to reach me in an emergency, you may call my cellular phone at 573-808-3828. Please do not send text messages to this phone. If you can't reach me at this number, and you are in imminent danger, please call the Alachua County Crisis Center at 352-264-6789. The Crisis Center has people available 24 hours a day.

You will be informed ahead of time of any days I will be unable to be reached (e.g., vacations). In these situations, we will work out who you can speak to in case of an emergency (e.g., Crisis Center, another therapist).

If you need to communicate with me to change or cancel an appointment, please call my office phone (352-273-2172) or send me an email at mintzl@ufl.edu. Use email only for appointment-related issues and not to discuss therapy issues. In using email, please note that while I am the only person checking this email, email is not considered a secure form of communication.

I do not routinely charge for phone calls with clients or others who the client authorizes me to speak to (e.g., other health providers) unless the call extends beyond 15 minutes. If it is an extended call or a rare instance when we have agreed on a telephone versus in-person session, it will be billed for the amount of time at my customary hourly rate. If I am called upon to attend meetings (e.g., for example, at school, or testify as a witness in court), I expect my usual fee for travel time, and the time spent at the proceeding (along with reimbursement for any unusual expenses related to travel).

I do not use social media (e.g., Facebook, Instagram) to communicate with clients. If you send me a friend request on Facebook I will not accept it. If you discover something I have written on social media or one of my public blogs that is concerning to you or that you have questions about, please discuss it with me.

USE OF CASE EXAMPLES IN TEACHING AND WRITING

I teach classes at the University of Florida, provide national lectures/presentations, and write both popular press books and blogs. In my teaching, speaking, and writing, I use case examples. The American Psychological Association Code of Ethics for Psychologists allow for the use of such examples if steps are taken to disguise the identity of the person. In my use of case examples, I always take great care to disguise identity, including for example changing a person's demographic information (i.e., sex, race, sexual orientation) and/or melding two case examples together. To illustrate, a prior client gave me permission to use our work in my popular press book on low sexual desire, provided that her identity was disguised. Upon reading, she stated that she could not figure out which person she was.

By signing this letter, you are allowing me to use our work in my public writing, teaching, and speaking, provided I do not reveal your identity and indeed, take precaution to make sure to disguise your identity.

However, if you do not want me to ever use our work as a case example in my speaking or writing or teaching, put an X through this section to indicate consent is not being provided.

FEES AND PAYMENTS

The fee for my initial session (which will be 60 -75 minutes) is $175.00. All subsequent sessions are for 50 - 60 minutes and are $150.00. You will be advised of any fee increases at least three months before an increase occurs; if there is a problem, I would be happy to discuss it with you.

If you are not paying by insurance, I ask that you pay for the session at the time of each visit.

If you are paying by insurance, your insurance will cover a portion of my fee and you are responsible for the remaining amount. If you are using insurance, you should be aware of the conditions of your particular policy (such as the amount of coverage per year, restrictions on services or providers, whether there is a co-payment expected, the amount of your deductible, pre-existing conditions, etc.).

Please be aware that most insurance companies do not cover couples counseling, unless the relationship issues are due to an identifiable, diagnosable issue of one partner and then the sessions can be billed in this manner. If seeing me for couples counseling, I will discuss this with you after the first session (i.e., I will let you know if the sessions can be billed or not). If I cannot bill your insurance, you will be responsible for paying the full fee for this first, and all subsequent, sessions.

For your convenience, I employ a medical billing professional who will work with you and your insurance company to determine if services are covered, what amount is covered, and what amount you owe. This professional will also bill your insurance directly.

If you will be using insurance and you provide me with the information in advance of your first session (see Billing and Insurance Information form), I will attempt to verify your benefits prior to our first session and let you know what you will owe and what the insurance will pay. I will then ask you to pay only the amount you owe at each session, starting with and including the first session.

If you do not provide me with insurance information prior to the first session or this information cannot be verified, I ask that you pay approximately 75% of my fee ($132.00 for first session and $115.00 for subsequent sessions). Once your insurance benefits are clear and if you have overpaid, I will either refund you the amount overpaid or deduct it from future amounts owed. If you have underpaid, I will let you know the amount owed to me. Once we know what your insurance will pay and what you will owe, I will then ask you to pay only the amount you owe at each session.

Regardless if benefits are verified before or after the first session, if your insurance company subsequently denies claims, you will still be responsible for the full amount. Indeed, in all cases, even when using insurance, you are ultimately responsible for the balance due.

If paying whatever amount you owe at each session is not possible, please discuss this with me, so that we can arrange an alternative plan.

All balances over 60 days old will incur a $25 handling fee per month. If a balance is unpaid for two months with no efforts to communicate about it, it will be forwarded to a collection agency. You are liable for the collection agency's additional fees and interest charges.

Confidentiality: Insurance Filing and Accounts with Overdue Balances

If you use health insurance to pay part of my fees, I have to give the insurance company some information about our therapy. If insurance is paying for part or all of your therapy, it is likely that I will be required to give you a diagnosis. The diagnoses that I will use come from a book called the DSM-V. I will share this information with you at your request, and I will be glad to talk with you about the implications of the diagnosis. Along with providing your insurance company information on your diagnoses, they will also likely ask for information on my fees, our meeting dates, and sometimes a treatment plan or summary of treatment. It is generally against the law for insurers to release any data about our office visits without your written permission. While I believe that the insurance company will act ethically and legally, I cannot control who sees this information at the insurer's office.

The professional billing agent I use works with many physicians and psychologists throughout Gainesville and the U.S. and abides by professional confidentiality. I only provide this professional with the information needed to bill your insurance (e.g., name, social security #, diagnosis, fee, meeting dates).

You have been asked to sign a statement allowing me to release such information to your insurance company, and my professional biller, as well as to consent to communicate with this professional directly about your bill. Please ask any questions you have on this before signing this letter.

If I have to turn an unpaid account over to a collections agency, I will provide the agency only the information they require in order to collect on the account.

Canceling or Missing Sessions

If you miss a session without canceling, or cancel with less than twenty-four hours-notice to me, you must pay your session fee before or at our next regularly scheduled meeting. Missed sessions cannot be billed to insurance, so you will be responsible for these payments.

A FINAL NOTE

Finally, again let me emphasize that you have the right to ask questions or express concern about anything that happens in therapy. I'm always willing to discuss how and why I have done something and to explore other alternatives that might work better for you. You can ask me about my training for working with your concerns, and can request that I refer you to someone else if you decide I'm not the right therapist for you. You are free to leave therapy at any time. If you are unhappy with what is happening in therapy, I hope you will talk about it with me so that I can respond to your concerns. I will take such criticism seriously. If you believe that I have behaved unethically, you can complain about my behavior to either the Ethics Committee of the American Psychological Association, 750 1st Street NE, Washington DC 20002-4242, or the Florida Agency for Health Care Administration, Consumer Services Unit (complaint forms are available at www.doh.state.fl.us/mqa/ or by calling 850-414-7209).

Please sign, acknowledging that you have read both this letter and the attached Notice of Privacy Practices (sign both copies and take one with you for your records).

Notice of Privacy Practices

Privacy and confidentiality have always been important to the practice of psychology. Privacy is regulated by federal and state government, as well as by professional organizations. The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA) sets a minimum national standard for privacy of records. HIPAA requires everyone to receive a privacy notice such as this one. This notice describe how medical information about you may be used and disclosed and how you can get access to this information.

Uses and Disclosures for Treatment, Payment, and Health Care Operations

Your treatment provider may use or disclose your protected health information (PHI), for treatment, payment, and health care operations purposes with your consent to this document. To help clarify these legal terms, here are some definitions:

- "PHI" refers to information in your health record that could identify you and must be protected.
- "Treatment, Payment and Health Care Operations"
 - Treatment means to provide, coordinate or manage your health care and other services related to your health care. An example of treatment would be to consult with another health care provider, such as your family physician or another mental health provider. Under most circumstances uses of PHI for treatment purposes will first be explained and discussed with you, so that your concerns and preferences can be taken into consideration.
 - Payment means obtaining reimbursement for your healthcare. Common examples of disclosing PHI for payment are disclosure of your PHI to your health insurer to obtain reimbursement for your health care or to determine your eligibility or coverage. Most insurers want to know your diagnosis and the type of treatment you are receiving before they will pay for the treatment.
 - Health Care Operations are activities that relate to the performance and operation of a practice. Examples of health care operations are quality assessment and improvement activities, business-related matters such as audits and administrative services, case management and care coordination
- "Use" applies only to activities within an office, such as utilizing, examining, and analyzing information that identifies you.
- "Disclosure" applies to activities outside of this office such as releasing, transferring or providing access to information about you to other parties

Your treatment provider will use or disclose the least amount of information necessary to accomplish the goal of the use or disclosure.

Uses and Disclosures That Require Your Authorization

Your treatment provider may use or disclose PHI for purposes other than for treatment, payment, and health care operations when your appropriate authorization is obtained. An "authorization" is written permission above and beyond the general consent that permits only specific disclosures. In those instances when your treatment provider is asked for information for purposes outside of treatment, payment, and health care operations, your authorization is necessary to release this information. If your treatment provider keeps psychotherapy notes, these are kept separately from the rest of your record and are given a greater degree of protection than your PHI. "Psychotherapy notes" are notes made about conversations occurring during a private, group, joint, or family counseling session.

You may revoke all such authorizations at any time, provided each revocation is in writing. You may not revoke an authorization after your treatment provider has already acted on it or if the authorization was obtained as a condition of obtaining insurance coverage and the law provides the insurer the right to contest the claim under the policy.

Emergencies

Please make your preferences regarding emergency notifications known to your treatment provider.

Uses and Disclosures with Neither Consent nor Authorization

Your treatment provider may use or disclose PHI without your consent or authorization in the following circumstances:

- Child Abuse: Any information or suspicion that a child is abused, abandoned, or neglected by a parent, legal custodian, caregiver or other person responsible for the child's welfare, by law must be reported to the Florida Department of Children and Families.

- Adult and Domestic Abuse: Any information or suspicion that a vulnerable adult (disabled or elderly) has been or is being abused, neglected, or exploited, by law, must be immediately reported to the Florida Abuse Hotline (1-800-962-2873).
- Health Oversight: If a complaint is filed against your treatment provider with the Florida Department of Health, the Department has the legal authority to subpoena confidential mental health information relevant to that complaint. Your treatment provider could be asked to release information to governmental agencies that check on whether privacy laws are being obeyed.
- Judicial or Administrative Proceedings: If you are involved in a court proceeding and a request is made for information about your diagnosis or treatment and the records thereof, such information is privileged under state law, and will not be released without a written authorization from you or your legal representative, or a court order, or a subpoena of which you have been properly notified and you have failed to inform your treatment provider that you are opposing the subpoena. The privilege does not apply when you are being evaluated for a third party or where the evaluation is court ordered. You will be informed in advance if this is the case.
- Serious Threat to Health or Safety: If you present a clear and immediate probability of physical harm to yourself, to other individuals, or to society, your treatment provider may communicate relevant information concerning this to the potential victim, appropriate family member, or law enforcement or other appropriate authorities. Your treatment provider will talk to you in situations when public health authorities encourage or require confidential reporting of dangerous or defective products, as well as of diseases that can be easily spread between people. Law enforcement officials have the right to request and receive protected health information when they are investigating a crime, a criminal, or a missing person. If you disclose information about illegal activity during a psychotherapy or counseling session, or in the course of treatment for this sort of behavior, we may not disclose that information to law enforcement officials.
- Worker's Compensation: If you file a worker's compensation claim, your treatment provider must, upon request of your employer, the insurance carrier, an authorized qualified rehabilitation provider, or the attorney for the employer or insurance carrier furnish your relevant records to those persons.

Patient's Rights and Provider's Duties

Patient's Rights:

- Right to Request Restrictions - You have the right to request restrictions on certain uses and disclosures of protected health information about you. However, your treatment provider is not required to agree to a restriction you request. You will be notified, in writing, if your requested restriction or other privacy request cannot be accommodated, and why not.
- Right to Receive Confidential Communications by Alternative Means and at Alternative Locations - You have the right to request and receive confidential communications of PHI by alternative means and at alternative locations. (For example, you may not want a family member to know that you are receiving treatment. Upon your request, your bills can be sent to another address.)
- Right to Inspect and Copy - You have the right to inspect or obtain a copy (or both) of PHI in your treatment provider's mental health and billing records used to make decisions about you for as long as the PHI is maintained in the record. On your request, your treatment provider will discuss with you the details of the request process. In the rare event that your treatment provider has a strong reason to object to your access, an alternative solution will be sought.
- Right to Amend - You have the right to request an amendment of your PHI for as long as the PHI is maintained in the record. Your treatment provider may deny your request. If your record cannot be amended, you may write a statement of disagreement that will be maintained in your record. On your request, your treatment provider will discuss with you the details of the amendment process.
- Right to an Accounting - You generally have the right to receive an accounting of disclosures of PHI regarding you. This accounting does not include uses and disclosures of information for the purposes of treatment, payment, or operations; disclosures or uses made to you or made at your request; uses or disclosures that fulfill an authorization signed by you; relevant uses or disclosures made to family or friends who are involved in your care or in paying for your care; or uses or disclosures needed to notify family or friends of your location or condition. On your request, your treatment provider will discuss with you the details of the accounting process.

- Right to a Paper Copy - You have the right to a paper copy of the notice, even if you have agreed to receive the notice electronically.

Provider's Duties:

- Your treatment provider is required by law to maintain the privacy of PHI and to provide this notice of her legal duties and privacy practices with respect to PHI.
- Your treatment provider reserves the right to change the privacy policies and practices described in this notice. Unless you are notified, in person or by mail, of such changes, the terms currently in effect will prevail.
- If your treatment provider does revise any policies or procedures, you will be notified in writing, in person or by mail, at the most recent preferred address that you have provided to the office staff.

Complaints

If you are concerned that your treatment provider has violated your privacy rights, or you disagree with a decision made about access to your records, you may contact your treatment provider directly. You may also send a written complaint to the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. You may also file a complaint to the addresses provided in letter above. I promise that I will not in any way limit your care or take any actions against if you file a complaint.

Effective Date, Restrictions, and Changes to this Privacy Policy

This notice will go into effect on July 15, 2003. In the future, the terms of this notice may need to be changed, creating new notice provisions effective for all PHI currently maintained. If a change is made, it will be you will be provided a copy of the revised notice.
